All the while the game's roster of content was being worked on, Krome Studios is currently hard at work on their next title. Just this past month saw the reveal of their next project, which will be another classic console franchise. I'll leave it up to you to figure out what the new game is. As far as games that are coming out in the near future, we'll see more new content and expansion packs for SCAR. I'm not sure what to expect on the current update, but I do know that the previous game update brought a pretty big game changer to the

SCAR. Today I'll be looking at that update. "New Assault Rifles on the Way" There's plenty of guns on the SCAR. Since the weapon is based off the assault rifle that the United States military had, there are plenty of variants of this rifle for the player to choose from. The weapon that really gets the spotlight in this update is the Sako SCAR. SCAR, Sako SCAR Sako, a small company based in Sweden, began mass production of their SCAR chambered in 5.56mm. This variant is perfect for the US military's needs as it is very lightweight, easy to carry and very reliable. While the Sako variant has the advantage of great range, it also has a shorter barrel, making it prone to overcharging. The good news is that it is the SCAR's "first shot" variant. It is also the most common, with over 25 million Sako SCARs in service. Despite this, there are plans to bring out a short barrel version as well. The Sako SCAR's aesthetics are pretty simple, sticking to a very classic feel. The top rails, handguard and even the stock are all made out of lightweight plastic. The only feature not made of plastic is the magazine well. 82157476af
