The Wyoming Supreme Court is set to hear arguments in a controversial dispute over whether a piece of northern Wyoming is part of Yellowstone National Park. The Wyoming Supreme Court is set to hear arguments in a controversial dispute over whether a piece of northern Wyoming is part of Yellowstone National Park. Geologists have traced the boundary between the two west of the park over the centuries, but it has never been set by statute. The issue is of interest to both the state of Wyoming, where two-thirds of the Yellowstone's landscape lies, and neighboring Montana. The Montana Supreme Court ruled that the disputed area belonged to the state, as did the U.S. Supreme Court. But in November, a three-judge panel in the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver reversed that, saying the boundary is a matter to be determined by Congress. The Wyoming Supreme Court will hear arguments on Feb. 16 in Cheyenne on what the state calls the "Cheyenne case" and what is known as the "Hill case." Judges will have to decide whether the dispute should be referred to the U.S. Supreme Court. The issue of where the boundary lies is not new. The two states have battled over the land for the last 50 years. Wyoming officials are in Cheyenne for the hearing, scheduled for a morning session on Feb. 16. The Montana attorneys are in their offices in Helena. "It's just one of those cases where the jurisdictions have been without clarity for decades," said deputy commissioner Mary J. Pecoraro. The Wyoming Supreme Court "has always held that the districts (parish) within which a legislative body exercises its election authority are in the territory within the limits of the county, no matter what the duration of their existence may be," said Pecoraro. "The statute has been on the books since 1895," she said. The Hill case involves a small, one-square-mile section of land in the state of Montana owned by a trust of which the current Wyoming governor is the beneficiary. He does not want the land to go to Montana or Wyoming, according to court documents. Lawyers for Montana have argued that the state owns the land because it was never ceded or relinquished Diltz-substituted olefins are useful as intermediates in the preparation of fungicide intermediates, epoxides and aziridines. Processes for producing diltz-substituted olefins include processes that employ as an initial step the reduction of tetra-substituted olefins. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 3,420,843 describes a process for converting allylic halides with dithiocarbamates to the corresponding diltz-

substituted olefins. It is known in the art that α,β -unsaturated nitrogen mustards such as aldrin, tri-o-tolylstannyl-dinitrochlorobenzene (DTNB) and N,N-bis(2-chloroethyl)glycine (EDB) react with various nucleophilic organic species to give the corresponding diltz-substituted olefins. For example, it is known in the art that aldrin, in the presence of a monothiocarbamyl derivative, such as ethylenediamine dithiocarbamate (EDT), will convert to 1,3-d f678ea9f9e
